PARKHURST A SPECTATOR.

He Looks On at the Police Investigating Committee's Session.

OTTO KEMPNER A WITNESS.

He Tells How His Lithographs Were Taken from Store Windows.

ORDERED OUT BY DETECTIVES.

Ex-District-Attorney Nicoll Vainly Objects to Hearsay Testimony.

The Senators from Albany, who are down here to investigate the doings of the Police Department, with special reference to their alleged interference with the rights of citizens at the polling-places during election times, resumed their hearing this morning in Part III. of the Court of Common Pleas.

until the political end of the inquiry is exhausted. This is in charge of John E. Milholland, Mr. Platt's lieutenant, who is just now actively engaged in the business of drumming up witnesses for the Commission. Yesterday his supply gave out before the day was over, but this was due to a misunderstanding on the part of the Marshal.

This morning Mr. Milholland was on hand bright and early with a string of a dozen or more witnesses in tow, and others expected. They were taken into a side room to wait until the Commission should be ready for them. According to those who know the plans of the Commission, there will be plenty of witnesses to fill out the long and protracted sessions of which Mr. Sutherland spoke in his opening address to the Committee and the public yesterday.

A large crowd had gathered in the corridor on the upper floor of the Court House long before 10:30, the hour set for the opening this morning, and as soon as the doors were opened all the available seats were taken.

There were no politicians of prominence in the early crowd, but several big men dropped in just before the arrival of the Commission. One of these was Dr. Parkhurst, who came in and took a seat at the table reserved for counsel.

"I am only here as a spectator," he said to an "Evening World" reporter, "and do not intend to take any part in the proceedings. No, I have nothing to say at present as to my plans with respect to any evidence that I may furnish to the Commission in future."

Gen. C. H. T. Collie, who was expected yesterday, and who will be one of the witnesses today, was also among the early comers. He sat over in the corner and chatted with John Sabine Smith, who was also on hand to give his assistance to the Commission.

Otto Kempner, the ex-Tammany man, who was defeated for Assembly in the Seventh District last November, on the independent ticket, came in and, espousing Dr. Parkhurst, went over and sat beside him and they engaged in earnest conversation. He is expected to be one of the witnesses examined today.

publican candidate received 1,933 votes, the regular Democratic candidate 4,000, and he himself 3,275. "What do you know about police interference in your district in that election?" asked Mr. Sutherland.

"I know nothing about it," he said. "I heard the morning of Nov. 3 that the police went through the entire district, from store to store, and ordered the proprietor to remove his poster and lithographs or not."

Mr. Nicoll jumped up here and wanted to know if the Commission was going to receive such hearsay testimony as this. "We will let the witness tell his own story," said Chairman Lexow, "and then we will judge of its competency."

Mr. Kempner went on to say that when his friends came in and told him that the police were taking down his lithographs, he was very much surprised. Many thought he had withdrawn from the race, but he did not. He had a meeting in his own shop, and saw the two detectives who had taken the lithograph down.

"I asked him what he was going to do with it, and he said the policeman had ordered him to take it down. I followed the two detectives, and saw them go into Solimayer's grocery store, at 46 Fifth street. "When I reached the place, someone was taking down my lithographs in the window, and he told me to get out."

"I went in and Mr. Tollmeyer said that he had taken the lithograph down at the request of the officers. "I had intended to go to Police Headquarters and complained of this action to the chief of police, and he told me he would investigate it. Afterward I wrote him a letter making a formal charge against the two detectives, and thereupon I concluded not to press the charges, and wrote to Supt. Byrnes to that effect."

There was a service in the church at 9 o'clock last evening and everything appeared to be all right at that hour. When the church was closed for the night there was no fire in the stove. How the fire started is a mystery.

BOSS TAILORS MAY GIVE IN.

Fair Chance that There Will Be No Strike of the Journeymen.

Arbitrators to Discuss the Wage Question on Monday.

Meetings will be held in the big tailoring shops of the city to-night and a vote taken on a proposition to appoint a committee with discretionary powers to settle the difficulties with the bosses. The employers want a reduce wages 15 per cent. If a committee is chosen it will be instructed at a meeting to be held to-morrow whether or not a reduction will be accepted and if so, just to what extent.

A strike would affect 1,500 men in this city, as of the country. The "Merchant Tailors' Association, numbering some eighteen of the leading Fifth avenue firms, has appointed a committee to meet an arbitration committee of the journeymen on Monday morning. John B. Leiman, Secretary of the journeymen's Association, said that the leading men of the organization did not want a strike, but on the other hand they were not disposed to submit to a 15 per cent. drop in wages. The only argument offered by the employers for the reduction is that owing to the hard times their customers expect to get cheaper clothes. The men expect to get the better of the fight, and the employers will recede from their position.

PLOT TO KILL A PRINCE.

Li Tchok and His Ministers of Corea, Were to Have Perished.

A Thousand Arrests Made—General News by Cable.

YOKOHAMA, March 10.—Advices received here from Corea say that a plot has been discovered to kill Prince Li Tchok, the heir to the throne, as well as all the Ministers. "The general opinion seems to be that the plot was hatched by the light, and a thousand arrests, it is added, have been made in connection with the conspiracy."

AN ANARCHIST ON ITALY.

Looks for Bomb Outrages, but No Revolution.

LONDON, March 10.—The Morning Post publishes an interview with M. Malato, the Anarchist leader, who has recently returned from Sicily. Malato declares that the troubles in Sicily were the outcome of distress among the inhabitants rather than the result of Anarchistic teachings. He says that the Anarchists tried hard to foment a general revolt, but failed.

Malato said he did not believe that civil war was likely to break out in Italy, yet he would not be surprised if Thursday's outrage in Rome proved to be the beginning of a long series of similar outrages, and although personally he deprecated indiscriminate attacks upon the general public, he did not see how such individual attacks could be prevented.

He declared that the Anarchist propaganda had a good foothold in the Italian army, and that many regiments would join in a revolution if ever there should be one.

POPE HEARD EXPLOSION.

Regarded the Report of the Bomb as a Slander Omen.

LONDON, March 10.—A despatch to the Standard from Rome says that King Humbert receives frequent reports as to the condition of the persons injured by the bomb explosion near the Chamber of Deputies, and also as to the investigations of the police into the authorship of the outrage.

The Pope was engaged in writing at the time of the explosion, but heard the noise, and, looking up, inquired "What's that? I fear some sinister event has happened." The Pope and also Cardinal Rampolla, the Pontifical Secretary of State, immediately sent messengers to make inquiries.

India Needs a British Dollar. LONDON, March 10.—A despatch to the Times from Singapore says that in consequence of the scarcity of Mexican dollars there is an urgent local demand for the coinage of a British dollar. The bank and merchants are almost unanimously in favor of the proposal.

ACCUSES THREE MEN.

Serious Charge Against Police Sergt. Monahan's Son.

Julia Hoar Says She Was Induced to Drink Drugged Wine.

Then, She Declares, He and Two Other Men Assaulted Her.

Edward Monahan, seventeen years old, of 219 East One Hundred and Third street, son of Sergt. Monahan, of the High Bridge police station, was a prisoner in Harlem Police Court this morning, charged with criminally assaulting Julia Hoar, a domestic, twenty-two years old, of 130 East Twenty-third street.

The woman also accuses two married men, who have not been arrested. They are John Ryan, twenty-eight years old, and James McLaughlin, thirty-two.

According to Miss Hoar's story, as told in court this morning, she met Monahan on the evening of Feb. 23 on Third avenue, near One Hundred and sixth street. They walked up the avenue together until they met Ryan. The three then went into James Dolan's saloon, in One Hundred and Sixth street, near Park avenue.

While in the sitting-room, Miss Hoar alleges that she was persuaded by her captives to drink wine and live together. Soon afterwards she said she became dizzy and almost physically helpless. When she awoke she found she was assaulted by both Monahan and Ryan.

"I made an outcry," said the girl, "but the barkeeper in charge, who was an Irishman, refused to come to her assistance. "Monahan then left me, and Ryan took me to a room in the saloon. I was kept a prisoner, locked up in the room, and there was no one else in the place when we arrived."

"I was kept a prisoner, locked up in the room, and there was no one else in the place when we arrived. "I was kept a prisoner, locked up in the room, and there was no one else in the place when we arrived."

When arraigned in court this morning the man recovered sufficiently to get to his feet and asked for warrants. The warrants were given Court Officer Kingsley, who arrested Monahan last night, and Ryan, who was arrested at Third street and Third avenue.

Miss Hoar is a comely brunette and has a pleasant and agreeable countenance. She says she had known Monahan for a long time and regarded him as a good fellow, but she had never seen him before the night of the alleged assault.

STUDENT ADMITS A FAKE.

Iowa Collegian Invented an Outrage Story to Escape a Contest.

WEST UNION, Ia., March 10.—D. A. Costigan, a student at the University at Fayette, alleged to have been sand-bagged and dragged out of town Tuesday night, has made a full confession. He admitted that he had invented the story to escape a contest with himself. To avoid taking part in the oratorical contest, Costigan besmeared his face with mud and hid in a hole with blood, and by means of a small syringe, injected fluid under the skin of his face, and finally he was sand-bagged as if struck by a club.

He reappeared at his room at 11 o'clock at night and told his roommate that unknown men had knocked him down, carrying him four miles in the country, and finally his roommate charged him with complicity in the matter.

Costigan then admitted that he had planned the whole affair to escape the contest and asked a question. Costigan is about twenty-five years of age. He was a candidate for County Superintendent in Clay County last fall. He has left the University.

PROUD OF HER UNCLE.

Jockey McLaughlin's Niece Cared for at Police Headquarters.

Matron Travers, at Police Headquarters, had in her care last night a nine-year-old girl who says she is Rose McLaughlin, niece of the late John McLaughlin, who was killed in the pig-skin, but who forsook that branch of horse racing to take up the occupation of training.

Rose had been on a visit to relatives in Hartford, Conn., and she arrived at the Grand Central Depot at 6 o'clock last evening no one was on hand to receive her.

Policeman Fox found her crying and took her to the Grand Central police station, where she was taken to Matron Travers and a message was sent to Mrs. McLaughlin at Gravesend.

Laughlin family, called at Police Headquarters this morning and took the little girl home to her parents at Gravesend.

AN ANARCHIST BOMB.

Unearthed by Young Hoffman, with Probably Fatal Results.

Dug Up with Others in the Williamsburg Sand Lots.

Boy Like, He Banged It Against a Huge Boulder.

Nicholas Hoffman, thirteen years old, of 231 Troutman street, Williamsburg, is hovering between life and death at his home to-day because he and a number of other small boys played with dynamite bombs which they found buried in the sand lots of the Twentieth Precinct.

Two other boys who were with Hoffman were hurt, and had it not been for a fortunate circumstance, all of them would undoubtedly have been killed.

Police Captain Kitzer has a number of men at work on the case, and they are of the opinion that the unfortunate boys found bombs which had been buried by Anarchists.

"The sand lots are on Knickerbocker avenue, and in the neighborhood flourish a number of Anarchist societies. About three months ago half a dozen bombs were found in the lots, but although several detectives were at work on the case for days, they could not learn who had buried them. At that time the lots were thoroughly searched, and it was said that there were no more bombs there."

"The sand lot is used as a playground by the boys of the neighborhood, and this morning about 8 o'clock young Hoffman, accompanied by Charles and Frank Oberly, twelve and eleven years old, respectively, who live at 263 Troutman street, went over to the lots to play."

While running about they turned up a large brick which stood near the center of the lot, and unearthed an oblong box of tin. The boys took it to the Hoffman home, where they found a number of other boys who were the oldest of the trio, took the box from the others and opened it.

Inside were half a dozen bombs, although the boys had no idea at the time what they were. Hoffman, who took one of the bombs out of the box and tried to bang it against that big stone, pointing to the boulder.

"The man who had buried the bombs ran. They had hardly gone 100 feet when Hoffman threw the bomb at the boulder, which was about thirty feet away."

The Oberly boys say they thought the explosion was caused by a dynamite bomb, although the soft sand broke their heads, although the soft sand broke their heads, although the soft sand broke their heads.

When they picked themselves up they saw Hoffman lying on the ground senseless. All the skin had peeled off his face and hands, and he was also wounded about the legs and body.

The screams of the boys attracted a crowd, and a big brewer carried the injured boy to his home. Hoffman was examined by a doctor, who says that the shock and the injuries he received were fatal.

There is a great deal of excitement in the neighborhood, and some of the more excited residents are threatening to lynch the first Anarchist they see.

FEARS FOR WIFE AND CHILD.

Policeman James Masters' Insane Hallucination of Abduction.

James Masters, forty years old, a patrolman of the Union Market police station, became insane at his residence, 446 Third avenue, last night, and at midnight he took to his bed. He was taken to the hospital and placed in the insane pavilion under charge of Dr. Douglas.

At the hospital this morning it was said that Masters was much better, and that his mental aberration was only temporary.

Masters was formerly attached to the mounted squad in Harlem. Some time ago he was thrown from his horse. Shortly after that his mind became unbalanced and he was placed in a hospital. He recovered and was physically and mentally well until the attack this morning.

ENGEL SWAPPED BONDS.

Now He Says Broker Saunders Cheated Him of $42.

Edward Saunders, senior member of the firm of Edward Saunders & Co., brokers, of 212 Broadway, was in the Tombs Police Court this morning on a summons issued at the request of Frank Engel, who was charged with larceny.

M'KANE'S SHORTAGE.

Half a Million of Town Bonds Unaccounted For.

Some of Them Said to Be Hypothecated in Brooklyn.

Apparent Discrepancy of $200,000 Disclosed.

Lawyer George H. Elliott and the Citizens' Committee of Gravesend who have been investigating the accounts of John Y. McKane, have discovered that the Chief failed to account on Jan. 1 last regarding the disposition of $500,000 of town bonds, as required by law. It is known that he had these bonds in his possession.

Now it is rumored that a large portion of the bonds, if not all, have been hypothecated with Brooklyn financial institutions, and that there is an apparent shortage in McKane's accounts of $200,000.

McKane's friends say the apparent shortage in the ex-Chief's accounts is due purely to his lack of business methods in conducting the affairs of the town. The Committee will not make known the true state of affairs of the town until a report has been prepared and submitted to the taxpayers.

The few books that have been found are in an awful muddle, McKane mixing town and personal affairs in such a manner as to greatly embarrass the investigators.

THIS MAY BE A SUICIDE.

A Stranger Disappears from the French Line Pier.

Entered a Closet on the Dock and Never Came Out.

Another case of mysterious disappearance is bothering Supt. West, of the French line pier, foot of Morton street. The man said that he had entered a closet near the end of the dock.

The man wore dark clothes and a soft felt hat. He walked with a slight limp. Watchman Brew kept a sharp lookout for the man, because there were some valuable goods on the dock, which he was responsible for.

About two minutes after the man entered the closet a freight-handler went in also. When the latter came out Brew asked him whether there was any one else in the closet. He said that there was no one there when he went in.

Brew made an examination of the place and found it empty. There was an opening in the closet, through which a man could easily have jumped. Watchman Brew reported the matter to Supt. West, who made careful inquiry, but could find no one who had heard a splash, or who had seen the man after he entered the closet.

Mr. West thinks the man jumped through the opening and that his body was carried away by the strong ebb tide. The man's hat and some of his clothing also floated out.

He also thinks that the man was either a passenger or the friend of a passenger on the French line pier this morning.

There is the third mysterious disappearance from the French line dock, or from the Company's steamers, which has occurred during the last few months.

BIG TUNNEL FOR BOSTON.

The Rapid Transit Problem Promptly Settled by Hub Officials.

SUBWAY FOR URBAN TRAFFIC.

It Will Be 10,000 Feet Long and Run Through the Heart of the City.

ELEVATED ROADS TO CONNECT.

It Will Cost About $3,500,000, and the Plan is Universally Approved.

Boston, like New York, must have rapid transit. Her two principal streets, not much wider than the traditional cow-paths, are congested. To get to the suburbs speedier she must either go up or go down. To go down means to tunnel. This is what she proposes to do in order to help her on Friday thousands get to and from their homes quicker and more comfortably than now.

The scheme would have caused the good old forefathers much distress of mind and would have secured for the promoters, had it been broached at that time, a piece of rope and a conspicuous position on the old sign which later generations revered as the gibbet on which witches were hanged. The winding paths which converged at the Common were good enough as highways in those days and imagination didn't picture the modern city, because people with imaginations were hanged there. But it didn't pay to cultivate such talents.

But the time has come when the historic cow-paths will not accommodate the traffic which has grown up in the two and one-half centuries which have elapsed since they were laid out. The thing of reference for things historic is no more in Boston that the people will not encroach upon the Common, the Granary burying-ground or the King's Chapel burying-ground. When that project was suggested a year ago there arose such a howl of indignation that the State House dome trembled, and even now the city officials are being pushed by other idol of historic worship.

As a matter of fact, the only thing that savors of dusty tradition about the big Capitol with its gilded dome is the parchment deed bearing the signatures of the Indians who sold the New England territory to the whites. But the people—some of them—protest as vehemently against the proposed rebuilding of the old fire trap as they did last year against taking a slice of the Common for the purpose of enlarging Tremont street and facilitating public travel thereby.

Having decided that Tremont street must not be widened, the people are now considering the only other resource within their command. They won't spread out, so they must go up or down. They are considering the advisability of doing both. Rapid transit they must have, and the plan which will be pushed by the city officials comprises a combination of subway and elevated railway.

SCOPE OF THE PLAN. The latter system will probably be a modification of other systems now in operation in various parts of the country, but the subway plan, if adopted, will be a novelty which no city in the world can duplicate.

Briefly stated, it means that Tremont street will be transformed into a double-decked thoroughfare. The upper part of the street to Scollay Square, and that the two-story system will be continued through the city to the new station at Washington street, thence to the site of the old Haymarket Square station.

There is hope for the fact that the fact that it will connect with an elevated railway system leading northward, over a new bridge to be built over the Charles River to Charlestown; thence to other cities and towns which form a part of the Boston area.

Returning south from the Pleasant street railway to serve as the artery of public travel to the south and west. That is Boston's rapid-transit scheme in a nutshell. It remains to be seen whether the scheme is carried out.

There is hope for the fact that the fact that it will connect with an elevated railway system leading northward, over a new bridge to be built over the Charles River to Charlestown; thence to other cities and towns which form a part of the Boston area.

TO SAVE THE COMMON. The subway originated in the fight last winter to save the Common. It was proposed to run an elevated railway over a portion of the great playground, while an open public square was planned to cut through the area made memorable by the revolt of the Bostonians against the
